All the artists performing today are from The City Lit (The City Literary Institute), central London's leading Adult Education college. The event reflects cultural and community life in the Capital - the performers are from all walks of life and their age range is 18 to 80. What they have in common, whether beginners or experienced concert artists, is their dedication to achieving the highest possible musical standards through their spare-time studies at The City Lit.

The Concert forms part of the Institute's 75th Anniversary celebrations. Since 1919, without even a break for World War II, The City Lit has been providing Further Education courses for Adults in central London, and as it moves into the final quarter of its first century, the Lit continues to meet the varied educational needs of the adult population of London.

The City Literary Institute expresses its grateful thanks to the Corporation of London and to the Principal, William Tyler, for supporting this event.
